

Automatically Creating JavaScript Objects To Invoke Methods on Server-side Java Beans

Abstract of the Disclosure

Examination of a server-side Java bean to automatically generates a JavaScript representation of the methods in the bean. The JavaScript representations of the methods are sent to the Web browser. The browser then creates JavaScript objects that can be called directly from other JavaScript code on the client side, and which communicate with the server-side method.